

welcome to the list

before you dive thirst-first into the list, take a quick second to read the foreword

foreword

put your money where your mouth is:
socially-conscious spending is the new black

Long gone are the days of sommeliers', noses in air, pontificating about the soil composition from their favorite A-list, Grand Cru vineyard. We've entered a new stage in the world of wine—one without snobbery and textbook definitive answers.

The wine snobs of the recent past have done more to fail patrons than to help them, assuming everyone wants to spend $300 on a bottle of wine or that everyone knows that Syrah and Shiraz are the same grape. It's time to make a change by offering our patrons a list where they are not afraid to ask questions or fumble a bit on a hard to pronounce name, in the process. It's time to realize wine, like food, is meant to be consumed and enjoyed.

Many of the names on these pages will be unfamiliar, because a great majority of the list is dedicated to preserving family-owned, small-batch, eco-friendly wines. Not only do they offer great value, but you can feel good by putting your money where your mouth is.

Raise a glass, not your nose,

Matt Reiser
wine director
